Foreword

More submissions. More vision. More talent. And we are more excited than ever. The 6th Edition of the Eindhoven Film Festival starts Friday the 9th of December with a fantastic film program. We're proud to announce that we received films from all over the globe, from 45 different countries. And, as a result, 50% of our film blocks consist of foreign productions. And since we celebrate the independent filmmakers of this world, we can't tell you how much we look forward to three days of film, conversations, Q&A's, workshops and lectures. And of course we reward those who are nominated with a Golden Wing Award! On Saturday - the 48Hour filmprojects will also select their winners.

The media landscape is rapidly changing, raising questions for the independent filmmaker. How to tell a story within a gamestructure? How do professional filmtheaters deal with the upcoming amount of short films? In our Round Table Discussion: 'Film is dead. Long Live film!' - we invited game-changers from all walks of life to debate on these issues. We hope that you will debate with us on Saturday!

Come and see the works of art of this year's generation. See you at the movies!

Liz meets the parents of her new boyfriend Pepijn during their regular game night, where Pepijn's mother Ingrid is calling the shots. What begins as an innocent game, quickly changes into a nightmare for Liz, when she clashes with Ingrid, who is determined to win the game at all costs.

3D PROJECT BY Thomas Neelemans

"We are inundated with media reports on the refugee problem. News articles about capsized boats, protests against the establishment of an asylum center and discussions on financing have been hot topics for the past years. Whereas the individual cases are way less in focus. After visiting "the jungle" in Calais, I immersed myself in the youngsters who try to get to England in many ways. In this installation you step into the world of the 15-year-old Adnan, who made a fatal attempt trying to reach England. Feel the fear and grief of the young Syrian boy by using virtual reality."

Media Innovation*
Oliver has worked on some of the biggest games of the nineties. Nowadays he is all about new narrative forms and sharing his knowledge with the world. This time he'll be sharing it with us.

VPRO, one of the main Dutch broadcasters, will join us too. With the opening of their Medialab just next door from the EFF they have secured their mission in learning the future of media.

Brendan Vos Host

Recently founded the new media foundation in Eindhoven and a close partner of the EFF over the past years.

FILM IS DEAD. LONG LIVE FILM! ROUND TABLE CONVERSATION

SATURDAY 10th of DECEMBER 20.00 Podiumzaal NATLAB

For years now, media as a concept has undergone many changes. How do these changes relate to the independent filmmaker? If anything, independent filmmaking seems to benefit from these changes. Methods and magicalities of film have reached new levels of accessibility and affordability. As the Eindhoven Film festival is all about independent filmmaking, there is little we can do but celebrate these changes.

However, after celebration comes a point of reflection. We'll be taking a closer look at these advances and discuss them in depth. We've asked our guests to come up with a series of statements, relating to a variety of fields. Our guests, all well-known and experienced figures in these fields, will sit down and discuss these statements. Later on they'll be joined by independent filmmakers. Together they will defend or attack these statements, all in search for inspiration and answers.

Philips Lightvibes & Harrie Verbeek

"Calm after the storm" is a captivating 2011 Dutch Oscar entry movie for 'best short film', presented by Harrie Verbeek from Branded Cinema. The film has been enhanced with Philips LightVibes - a revolutionary innovation that intensifies the experience of watching on-screen content by delivering compelling, subtle ambient lighting effects to viewers peripheral vision. Q&A + conversation after the film

Calm after the storm It seems that life comes to a standstill for Anna, who receives word that something happened to her boyfriend David. Between receiving the call and the experience of her first emotion is an empty interval in space and time. As Anna realizes the inevitable consequence, her breath stops short and her heart skips a beat. Her world freezes and the present, the past and the future converge in one instant.

The Narratology of Films: How to understand the stories of movies.

Brendan Vos *Production Designer,
 Teacher and Project Manager*

Films are all about telling stories. In academics this is called the narratology of films. Brendan studies this in-depth and is well-versed with the works of Mieke Bal, Peter Verstraten and the original formalists like Eisenstein, Propp and others. During this seminar he covers some of the key principles in narratology and, as he too is a filmmaker, helps make them applicable to the daily acts of watching and making movies.
